Inspirations Essay Text

Being born into a family of doctors, engineers, and sharp businessmen, being an aspiring filmmaker makes me the outlier. Though my immediate family now supports my career choice, that has not always been the case. I have been fixated on the arts and humanities since I was a kid. I immersed myself in reading or writing stories and loved exploring art museums. My academic excellence didn't help since it made my family assume I could put my intelligence to 'better use' (Computer Science!).

So, I had to make a case for why I wanted to join the ranks of humanists to my father, whose argument has been that Arts and Humanities are mere "hobbies that don't prepare you for the real world." In our debates, I stood my ground and explained how English literature, films, and theatre have helped me build critical thinking, effective communication, and empathy – useful skills I can use in my personal and professional life. While I argued that the humanities are the medium through which I interpret the world, my father has repeatedly stated how pre-professional degrees ensure job security and described the struggles his family endured to put food on the table.

My desire for things to change was eventually fulfilled through meaningful discussions with my father. I understand his concern for my financial stability while he recognizes my sincerity concerning films and has become genuinely supportive.
